

A COMPANY THAT STRIVES TO MEET THE HIGHEST STANDARDS AND TO MAKE CUSTOMERS FEEL TOTALLY PROTECTED...

Feel protected with Atlas Fire & Security

Atlas Fire & Security can offer a complete solution. From initial design and installation to final commissioning and service, Atlas provides it all. Not only that, but once a system is installed, customers can rely on excellent after-sales service 24-hours-a-day, seven-days-a-week provided by the company's team of highly qualified engineers. The importance of a reliable and dependable service can't be emphasised enough and Atlas Fire & Security has that firmly in place. This is enhanced further with the extensive range of products the company offers from some of the world's leading manufacturers. As Northern Ireland's leading independent, open protocol supplier and maintainer of fire and security products, Atlas Fire & Security is ideally placed to advise customers on the most appropriate systems to meet individual requirements.

Robert Creagmile, Sales Director, commented, "The extent of our product range means that we can offer a system that is ideally tailored to suit the customer's exact needs – we are not constrained by the limitations of having just one product range on our books.

"In addition, by utilising an open protocol system, customers can enjoy complete freedom of choice, not just at the installation stage but also when the system needs to be updated or renewed. This may put extra pressure on us in the future, as our customers are in a position to speak to other companies, but we have full confidence in our service and products." Since becoming an independent and dedicated fire and security company in January 2007 Atlas

Fire & Security has built up an impressive client portfolio. "At Atlas Fire & Security we strive for contractual excellence in all aspects of our business, with the aim of giving our customers a first-class service with considerable added value," continued Robert.

This excellence has been delivered time and time again on a varied selection of projects that includes residential, offices, offices and healthcare facilities. The company's impressive project portfolio also includes a long-term contract with Belfast HSST for fire alarm maintenance at a range of sites including the Royal Victoria Hospital, Knockbracken Healthcare and Musgrave Park Hospital further extended to include Belfast City Hospital.

But the demands placed on the company also increases the need to maintain the highest standards and, again, this is an area that Atlas Fire & Security takes very seriously.

Last year, the Belfast-based company was awarded the NSI Fire Gold standard for fire detection systems, CCTV, intruder alarms and door access solutions. Atlas Fire & Security has also continued to maintain and expand its third part accreditations with the National Security Inspectorate (NSI) and further strengthen their relationship with the Fire Industry Association (FIA).

While NSI approval is entirely voluntary it involves a lot of hard work and underlines the attention to detail that Atlas Fire & Security strive to achieve.

Day at the races!

Atlas Fire & Security highlighted the company's close relationship with its customers by hosting a Day at the Races recently. The event took place at Citigolf in Belfast and Atlas used it to say a big thank-you to customers for their continued support. The company's strategic partners and suppliers also played their part by donating a selection of prizes for the raffle, with all the money going to the Malcom Seargent Children's Cancer Fund.
